5. SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE IN ADJACENT AREAS.

Whether there is an outright conscription of labor in N. KOREA has always been a debateable subject, although it has been established fairly well that the Communists have used various methods to persuade "voluntary" enlistment. More recent indications tend to confirm the belief that the mobilization of workers is arbitrary. Information obtained from a translation of SEOUL police station reports indicate that KIM, Il Sawng, head of the Interim People's Committee, has ordered the conscription of all young men from 17 to 27 years of age in N. KOREA.

The report is based on an alleged broadcast of the PYONGYANG Radio Station at 0600 hours on 14 June 1946. At this time it was announced that the Interim People's Committee had declared its intention of restoring the "ancestral country" and increasing the output of food and products in N. KOREA. In fulfillment of this goal, General KIM, Il Sawng has ordered the mobilization of all young men, as stated above, for duty as patriotic laborers. Anyone who refuses to comply with this edict will be punished. According to the broadcast, General KIM was to start a tour of inspection on 16 June 46 of the important cities in both North and South HANGYONG Provinces.
