leftists, suspected of participation in recent disturbances, were picked up through the combined efforts of the Police and Constabulary. The Police proceeded to raid houses suspected of harboring members of raiding parties, while the Constabulary served to block off certain areas of the town. Thirty of the leftist suspects were held for a thorough screening. No violence occurred during the period of the search. Many of the raiders have been identified as members of the South Korea Labor Party and the Democratic Peoples Front. (A-2)
